

Best's Great Western

"Foudre Ferment" Riesling

Tasting Notes:

An intriguing nose of florals and citrus, evoking finger lime, elderflowers and wet mill stone. A latticework of creamy citrus flavors entwined with the unrelenting drive of steely acidity and powdery minerality.

Production Notes:

The aromatic juice is given extended skin contact then wild fermented in a large French oak foudre (barrel) made by the famous cooper Marc Grenier. The resultant wine exhibits both the complexities of a barrel ferment and spontaneous fermentation without the overt oak flavor, due to the large size and subtlety of the foudre.

Cellaring:
